ABSTRACT

This document provides a bibliography of materials and a pathfinder, directing users to available resources on African Americans in Greater Cincinnati (Ohio) and Northern Kentucky. This guide is designed to assist students and researchers of all levels in locating information on African Americans. The guide begins with a pathfinder that directs the user to various types of resources available and to subjects that can be used to locate materials within their libraries. The sources listed under background information in this section provide summaries of topics and issues in Afro-American studies. Usually the sources contain an explanation and definition of the issue, identify important persons and groups, and contain a list of other sources of interest. The pathfinder section explains the use of the library catalog and guides to periodicals. Following the pathfinder is a list of standard works that can be consulted by the general reader as well as the beginning scholar. The categories reflect African-American culture; economics; history in greater Cincinnati, northern Kentucky, and the United States as a whole; arts; literature; and social and political conditions. These sections are followed by a list of major collections of primary materials and a list of current and historical journals. The collections can be in manuscript, microform, or paper formats. In using these two sections, one should consult with the holding library. Finally, a directory of institutions describes the African-American collections of responding organizations, and includes the hours, addresses, and other practical information necessary to use the collections. INTRODUCTION

This guide is designed to assist students and researchers of all levels in locating information on African Americans. It begins with a pathfinder which directs the user to various types of resources available and to subjects which can be used to locate materials within their libraries. Following the pathfinder is a list of standard works which can be consulted by the general reader as well as the beginning scholar. The categories reflect African-American culture, economics, history (Greater Cincinnati, Northern Kentucky, and general United States), arts, literature, and social and political conditions. These sections are followed by a list of major collections of primary materials and a list of current and historical journals. The collections can be either in manuscript, microform, or paper formats. In using these two sections, consult with the holding library. Finally, a directory of institutions describes the African-American collections of responding organizations and includes the hours, addresses, and other practical information necessary to use the collections. We encourage libraries to copy any or all of this resource guide.

AFRICAN-AMERICAN RESOURCES
A PATHFINDER GUIDE

I. BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The sources listed below will provide summaries of topics and issues in Afro-American Studies. Usually they contain an explanation and definition of the issue, will identify important persons and groups and contain a list of other sources of interest. Many of the ideas found here can be further explored in more detail in books and journal or magazine articles.

The Negro Almanac: A Reference Work on the African American. Harry A. Ploski and James Williams. Gale, 5th edition, 1989.

Encyclopedia which includes historical and current information on people and issues.

Encyclopedia of Black America, W. Augustus Low, ed. McGraw Hill, 1991.

Who's Who Among Black Americans. Who's Who Among Black Americans, Inc. 1975/76+.

Provides biographical information on leaders in fields such as arts, sciences, business. Also includes obituaries.

Dictionary of Black Culture. Wade Baskin and Richard Runes. Philosophical Library, 1973.

II. BOOKS

To find books located in your library you must use the catalog. Check with your librarian as your catalog may now be computerized. Below are listed some possible subjects you may wish to use. Remember proper names (King, Martin Luther Jr.), names of specific places (Birmingham, Alabama), and certain events (March on Washington) can also be subject headings. Unfortunately all libraries do not use the same subject headings. If your library does not use the subjects listed below, consult with your librarian. Note that the Library of Congress uses the word Black to denote members of the Black race world-wide. Also some libraries may still use the antiquated subject "Negros" for their older items.

- Afro-American arts
- Afro-American executives
- Afro-American folklore
- Afro-American inventors
- Afro American scientists
- Afro-Americans--authors (or other professions)
- Afro-Americans--music
- Afro-Americans--women
- Afro-Americans--civil rights
- Afro-Americans--education

- Afro-Americans--history
- Afro-Americans--race identity
- Afro-Americans--social conditions
- Afro-Americans--social life and customs
- Afro-Americans--southern states
- Afro-Americans in business
- American Methodist Episcopal Church
- Black race
- Black theology
- Blues (Music)
- Blues musicians
- Civil rights movements
- Freedmen
- Gospel music
- Jazz
- King, Martin Luther, Jr.
- Minority business enterprises
- Mulattoes
- Operation Push
- Piano music (Blues)
- Rhythm and blues music
- Slave-trade
- Southern States
- Soul music
- Spirituals
- X, Malcolm

III. JOURNALS AND MAGAZINES

Information contained in journals and magazines will be narrower in subject matter but will be more current than books. Different indexes will index different journals and cover different subject matter. You may have to choose several indexes to find information on your topic. Also different indexes will use different subject headings. Use some of the ideas in the BACKGROUND sources listed in section I.

Each index will provide you with a citation or all the information needed to locate the article. Some will also include an abstract or summary of the contents of the article. Below is an example taken from Readers Guide to Periodical Literature. All citations may not be arranged exactly the same but will contain similar information.
